Chauncy St. April 15. 1842.

Dear Deborah, 3. P. M.

I expect to go out of town in an hour or two, so cannot write you just as I could wish. By the same chance I suppose you will get Henry's & Maria's letters, so I need say nothing of them. I think they are encouraging, though I am sorry Henry was in such low spirits. I received your letter this morning. I have somewhat altered my mind about going to N. York I think some of going as I heard that other night as could come & go for $5. E. G. Loring & his mother are going & I think Henrietta. I went to Norris's for your package but they have heard nothing of it. I shall send Caroline to Gillespie to ask about sleeves. I have been myself, because I was waiting to see some thing about engaging her to cut my brown silk. I have by the way had a present of a pretty nice penny chintz from Mrs Loring. She & I happened to go into Hall's together & this came of it.) Our Quarterly Meeting held Wednesday was no great. I read Maria's Glasgow letter & sundry resolutions were passed. We had expected Remond, but he was at Lowell at Dr F's trial & could not come. The Dr called last night after I left & went to bed, & I got up and went down. He was full of troubles. Dexter had disappointed him & he was running all over town for a lawyer & finally supposed the trial would have to come on with nobody but Hopkinson. He thinks he shall lose it & he was ready to think he should fail on most all the counts. I have called this week on Mrs Farnell, Mrs Allen, Miss Rimmer, Mrs Merriam, Mrs Loring & Sarah Freeman. Pretty well I think. & Caroline & I have taken tea with the Smith wife's

Mr Chapman is quite well at least mending very fast
There is a great deal of sudden sickness & death.
No body can tell the causes or the cure. I will write you more at length when less hurried. Your shawl & a muslin gown will come herewith. I shall get her to send the bundle off tomorrow. Yrs ever M. Lloyd.
